

ABSTRACT

[0021] Preferential optical splitters are used in a multichannel wavelength measurement device. The optical splitters preferentially provide light at a certain wavelength to a detector. Preferentially providing light to the detectors allows for increased optical efficiencies.